Cobb's Play Staged in New York

By Bill Plott

"Sunday's Child," a play by UM English professor Bill Cobb, was staged in New York May 11-23 by the H.B. Playwrights Foundation with noted actress Celeste Holm in the lead role.

Also appearing was Rochelle Oliver, one of the stars of the Horton Foote "Story of a Marriage" plays on American Playhouse. Marlene Mancini was the director.

The only previous production of "Sunday's Child" was last spring by the Montesvallo Main Street Players, the local community theatre group.

"The Foundation is an acting and directing school in Greenwich Village," said Cobb. "They produce original plays from time to time as a kind of showcase for plays that otherwise might not get produced in New York."

"They are able to attract top flight actors, directors and other people who are willing to work there just for the love of theatre. That's how it's gotten such a good cast."

Cobb said Foote suggested that he send the play to the Foundation.

The Demopolis native said he had a hard time believing the telephone call confirming the production.

"At first I thought it was somebody playing a joke on me, especially when she said Celeste Holm would be in it," he recalled. "Of course I was extremely excited about it, especially because I had the chance to work with these people who are really into my kind of theatre."

"I hope the production brings the play to the attention of some regional theatres around the country."

Cobb teaches creative writing in the English department and is a member of the Dramatists Guild of America. He holds degrees from Livingston University and Vanderbilt University.

He has written two novels and a number of short stories and plays. His most recent novel, "The Hermit King," was released a few months ago.

He is married to the former Loretta Douglas, a 1967 UM alumna and the director of the Harbert Writing Center. They have one daughter, Meredith.

Annual Fund Hits 92 Percent

By May 1 the 1986-87 Annual Fund campaign had reached $828,929.24—92 percent of the $900,000 goal. Cash gifts to the Falcon Club were the best in that organization's history. The totals also showed a 35 percent increase in gifts from businesses and friends.

Bill Latham '64, chairman of the campaign, said the success of the alumni effort in fund raising is due in large measure to the work of volunteer class representatives. "The class reps' personal contact with classmates is important as we look toward reaching the goal by June 30," Latham said.

Class representatives wrote personal notes to their classmates who had given in the past three campaigns, but had not yet given this year.

UM Graduates Face Changing, Challenging World

By Sue Chosa

Graduates and their guests gathered on the lawn of Flowerhill to attend spring commencement exercises.

The ceremony featured an address by Robert H. Atwell, president of the American Council on Education, a Washington, D.C.-based umbrella organization for all colleges and universities in America.

Atwell painted a graphic picture of a changing world and nation, then offered advice on how to face the challenges of the future.

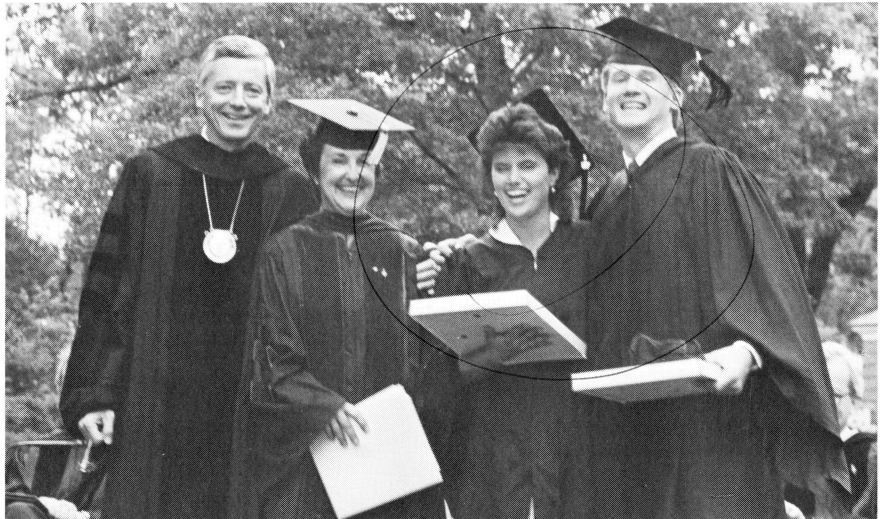

"America is in the midst of a cold shower," he said, suggesting that the country's recent experiences with Vietnam and Japan have shown that "we are far less than invincible and can no longer expect to dominate the world economically and militarily."

"You are the first generation who will probably not be better off than your parents," he said. "You will be lucky to hold your own."

Atwell cited future concerns such as the aging of America, changes in the structure of the family and an increase in the percentage of minorities. "We are in danger of creating a permanent social underclass," he said.

He advised graduates to address this imbalance and not retreat behind a military Star Wars. He urged them to reject the quick fix approach and emphasize civic responsibility.

"Don't confuse credentials with ability or high position with wisdom," he said. "And remember that the surest defense against extremism is tolerance."

Business Accreditation Tops List of Good News

By Sue Chosa

National accreditation for the College of Business topped the list of good news items announced at a press conference recently held at the Hill House, the new site of the Center for Excellence for Undergraduate Liberal Studies.

College of Business Dean Bill Word told reporters that UM had just become the smallest public institution in the nation to have its College of Business accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB). The accreditation ends an eight-year effort by UM faculty and staff to attain the national accrediting body's standards. "Very few colleges our size ever achieve it," he said.

Word said that accreditation means a lot to the average business student. "It makes it easier to recruit good students," he said. "Then they interact with each other creating a better learning environment.

"It makes it easier to recruit good Ph.D.s in business since they know that AACSB accreditation means certain standards are maintained. Also some major companies only recruit at accredited schools so our graduates will have an easier time getting good jobs."

UM President Jim Vickrey pointed out that Montevallo, responding to the mandate of the UM Trustees, has now attained national accreditation in 10 of 13, or 77 percent, of the academic programs in which accreditation can be obtained.

The respective departments are now working on such recognition in chemistry, mass communications and theatre. The University is also seeking a Phi Beta Kappa chapter as a means of "accrediting" the liberal arts.

College of Arts and Sciences Dean

John Lott announced the names of the first two Vacca professors. Noted American composer Norman Dello Joio will be in residence during the spring semester, followed by Edwin McClellan, professor of Japanese studies at Yale, who will occupy the chair during the first summer term in 1988.

The Vacca Professor in residence will live in an apartment in the Center for Excellence, teach classes in the classroom there, have an office in the building and use the public rooms for informal contacts with students and faculty.

The Center will also house offices for the General Education Program, the Honors Program and the Academic Development Program.

Other improvements to the physical plant announced at the conference included the equipping of the foreign language lab and the completion of renovations to the residence halls.

Treasurer John Blackwell also revealed plans for a student activities complex to be in use by next January. Located on recently acquired land adjacent to the UM campus, the facility will include: basketball, racquetball and volleyball courts; an indoor track; aerobic dance and weight training areas; locker rooms and office space.

Outdoor facilities proposed are: baseball, football and soccer fields; tennis and racquetball courts; jogging trails; and a possible swimming pool. Plans are also underway for renovating quarters for mass communications and constructing a Little Theatre.

Trustees Approve Fall Tuition Decrease

The UM Board of Trustees voted at their spring meeting to lower tuition rates for Montevallo undergraduates, beginning in the fall, establishing a tuition rate of $672 for campus residents. Other undergraduate students will pay $48 per credit hour.

The action—the first such reduction in decades at the 90-year-old state college—was taken after UM Treasurer and new Vice President for Facilities and Financial Affairs John Blackwell reported to the Board that “financial stability” had been restored to the institutional budgets battered last year by reductions in state funding.

The trustees, four of whom were attending their first meeting since being appointed to the UM board by Gov. Guy Hunt, also approved the issuance of bonds to refinance previous bonds and to permit construction of new campus facilities.

Meeting for the first time in the newly dedicated Merrill Room in Reynolds Hall, they honored retired State Supreme Court Justice Pelham Merrill and his wife, Gladys, a UM alumna, who were special guests at the meeting. The room is a conference and meeting room as well as a small museum of memorabilia associated with the career of Judge Merrill, who served on the state’s highest court from 1953-76.

In personnel matters, the trustees approved emeritus status at full professor level for two outstanding faculty members who retired this spring. They are Dr. Johnnie Carlisle, Home Economics, and Bruce Tolbert, Music.

The trustees also approved leaves of absence for Ted Metz and Catherine Dunn of the recently-accredited Art Department, who will spend the fall on the University of Georgia’s campus in Cortona, Italy. Ms. Dunn will be Artist-in-Residence and Metz will be teaching traditional “Renaissance” sculpture techniques.

Alumni Affairs and Development Director Mary Lou Williams reported that the 1986-87 Annual Fund campaign has reached a total of more than $823,818, 91% of the goal of $900,000. The campaign closes June 30.

The trustees heard reports on a number of other matters involving budgetary planning, construction and equal opportunity. They took specific action on several items, including:

—Approving hiring goals for 1987-88 designed to increase the number of blacks and women in the specific positions noted as “under-staffed” in a 1986-87 Utilization Analysis. UM’s overall totals in that regard already exceed national norms.

—Approving resolutions recognizing outgoing Student Trustee Marty Crawford; outgoing SGA President Norman Darden; the Merrills for the Merrill Room and their support of UM scholarship programs; outgoing student newspaper editor Stan Mims; outgoing Faculty Council Chairperson Jim Rogers; Dean Bill Word and the College of Business faculty; and former UM trustees Paul Salter, Neal Shirley and Ruth Spencer.

Justice Merrill Room Dedicated

By Martha Crocker '87

The University of Montevallo recently dedicated a new conference room to former State Supreme Court Associate Justice Pelham J. Merrill.

Located in Reynolds Hall, the room is a 50th wedding anniversary gift from Merrill's wife Gladys, a 1934 graduate of the University.

The room was unveiled this spring in a special ceremony attended by Judge Merrill's law clerks, university officials and family and friends of the Merrills.

"This is my golden wedding anniversary gift to him," said Mrs. Merrill. "We have no children to carry on the family name. But he had too varied and interesting a career not to be remembered and receive some recognition like this.

"This is something I have dreamed of having for him for a long time. We are grateful to the University, the president and the Board of Trustees for allowing me to do this."

"We appreciate the help that Vice President for University/Public Affairs Joe Brindley and Director of Alumni Relations/Development Mary Lou Williams have given. They have given us marvelous help and support," she said.

"This is a highlight of my life," said Judge Merrill. He thanked family and friends who came to the ceremony, as well as those who helped put the room together.

The Merrill Room contains memorabilia from the judge's career, ranging from information about his years as principal, coach and teacher to the history of his service on the Alabama Supreme Court.

Included in the collection are copies of speeches and letters, books from his personal library, portraits of the Merrills, various plaques, trophies, diplomas and photographs which outline his life to date.

The collection also features an engraved brass spittoon and a gavel from his career with the Alabama Supreme Court.

Judge Merrill graduated from the University of Alabama in 1926 at the age of 18. Following graduation he taught school, coached and served as school principal at Blocton and West Blocton schools in Bibb County.

He earned his law degree from Alabama in 1934 and practiced law in Heflin until 1953, when he became an associate justice of the Alabama Supreme Court. He retired from that office in 1976.

Judge Merrill also served four years of active duty in the U.S. Air Corps during World War II.

He has been active in civic and community affairs, including the YMCA, for which he was honored for his service as chairman of the Youth Legislature Board of Directors.

He married the former Gladys Morrison of West Blocton in 1936. She taught home economics in Cleburne and Marion counties.

Former VPAA Warren Speaks At Honors Day

Over 250 University of Montevallo students were recognized for their achievements on Honors Day.

Former vice president of academic affairs Russ Warren addressed students, faculty, parents and staff who gathered in Palmer Hall for the morning convocation.

Warren, now vice president at James Madison University in Virginia, had just served as acting president of that institution and discussed his experiences with the audience.

He said that at first he thought being president meant that one didn't have a boss and then he realized, "I did have a boss and that boss clearly was me."

He advised the honor students that "everyone should be president of his or her own area, no matter how narrowly that area is defined. I contend that the standards we set for ourselves will be higher than those anyone else would impose on us. If we learn to make decisions for ourselves and be the president of our area, I think we will be amazed by the impact we can have."

Approximately 10 percent of the student body received honors either at the campus-wide convocation in the morning or at those held by the colleges in the afternoon.

Seventy-three were accorded highest honors for maintaining a 3.8 or above overall average on a 4.0 scale while 89 received honors for a 3.5 overall grade point average. Many other awards and scholarships were presented.

The Merrill Room will be used as a conference room for members of the University Foundation and for the Board of Trustees. It is open to the public during regular business hours. Touring arrangements may be made through the office of Development/Alumni Relations, 665-6215.

Baseball

Following a slow start, the team rallied over the final two-thirds of the season to finish with a 31-23 record. Although the Falcons were only third in the NAIA District 27 during the regular season, they finished second in the tournament, narrowly missing advancement to the Area 5 meet.

First baseman Chris Walker was named District 27 player of the year and was one of three Falcons on the All-District team. Joining him were center fielder Kelvin Shephard and designated hitter David Jones.

Walker, a junior from Atmore, led the league in batting (.421), hits (75), home runs (140), doubles (15) and RBI (59). His batting average was a new school record.

The future looks good for the team, with only four players being lost to graduation.

Golf

The 1987 spring season was one of rebuilding. Playing with a squad of young players, the Falcons finished third in the NAIA District 27 tournament at Scenic Hills Country Club in Pensacola, Fla.

Notes . . .

With the athletic year coming to a close, UM had three NAIA All-Americans: Cindy Walchli, volleyball; Kelly Green, women's basketball; and Chris Walker, baseball. . . . A total of 12 Falcons were named to All-District 27 teams during the year. They included Walchli, Donna Jenkins, Kristy Golden and Missy Youngblood in volleyball; Green, Diane Collins, Pam Johnson and Sharen Douglas in women's basketball; Bobby Joe Jackson in men's basketball; and Walker, Shephard and Jones in baseball.

ailing and infectious girls could at last be moved from the rooms of the dormitory that had been set aside for them (these sick rooms were at the end of West Main on the third floor).

Of the "new" infirmary, Dr. Wilkinson said, "I can only condemn it." Not mincing words, he found that the ceilings were too low, the rooms were too small to allow proper air circulation (the exhalations from the bodies of sick persons are "obnoxious and poisonous," Wilkinson declared), and there were adjoining stables, chicken yard and a "decaying lay house" that did nothing to add to the salubrity of the place.

Dr. Wilkinson—and the students—had to put up with the makeshift infirmary for several years, however. The new building, named Peterson Hall for the late Francis Marion Peterson, second president of the institution, was not ready for occupancy until April of 1914. Ironically, he had only a year to enjoy the new facility; the Board of Trustees wanted a resident physician, and a woman, to boot. In May of 1915, they voted to invite "Miss Willena Peck" to accept the position.

Dr. Wilkinson remained vocal to the end; he asked for, and was denied, permission to speak to the Board before their vote for Miss Peck. He encouraged a number of friends and colleagues to write to the president, Dr. Palmer, and to the Board to entreat them to reinstate him as the school physician. The letters had no effect—the Board was set on Dr. Peck.

She came, of course, and continued Dr. Wilkinson's tradition of sanitation and general prevention measures for health; moreover, she won the students' confidence, and became a well-known, well-respected, and well-loved campus figure. She stayed at Montevallo her entire career, retiring in 1952.

Former Roommates, Lost in Conversation, Meet Fellow Alumnus Beside Interstate

Two former college roommates who hadn't seen each other in five years were so busy talking about former classmates and Homecoming 1987 that they totally ignored the gas gauge on their automobile last February.

"At a desolate spot halfway between the Eastaboga and Talladega, it happened. We ran out of gas," recalled Melba Ruth Jones Williams of the experience she and Mary Grace Orr Longfellow shared along I-20. "At our ages, we didn't know whether to show a knee, wave a white handkerchief, or start crying!"

As it turned out, those weren't their only options. A moment later, a handsome young man pulled up, offered them a ride to a service station, and then drove them back to their car again. He turned out to be Barry L. Allphin M'77 of Birmingham.

"The experience made these two adherents of 'all-girl' schools mighty grateful that Alabama College had become the coeducational University of Montevallo," said Mrs. Williams.

The experience was the beginning of an unofficial 45th reunion of the Class of '42 at this year's homecoming. It started when Jean Appleton Voltz of New York and Martha McRae Van Liere of Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif., approached Theda Wyatt Norden of Birmingham about attending Homecoming.

"Theda, thinking it was a good idea, sent out letters to a large number of 1942 graduates, asking them to a breakfast at her house," Mrs. Williams said. "The responses kept her phone ringing for days."

It became obvious that a breakfast wasn't the best approach. Mrs. Norden arranged for a block of rooms and a dinner at the Sheraton Perimeter Park South in Birmingham the Friday night before Homecoming. Nineteen alumnae and five husbands attended.

On Saturday morning, several carloads drove to Montevallo, where they were joined by several other Class of '42 members unable to attend the Friday night dinner. The unofficial reunion outnumbered a lot of the official ones in attendance.

Class of '42 members and husbands at Homecoming included Melba Ruth Jones Williams, Mary Grace Orr Longfellow, Elna Grisham and Calvin Sanderson, Mary Edna Wallace Naugher, Elizabeth "Sis" Taylor Wallace, Deannie Hollis Lawrence, Theda Wyatt Norden, Virginia Frost DuVal, Jeanne Appleton Voltz, Martha McRae VanLiere, Lera Dee Conway DuBose, Mary Jo Dean and Phillip Adams, Edith Taylor Owen, Ruth Wright Cole, Marjorie Grimes and James Hugh Kysar, Edwina Morgan Murphy, Pat Bozenhard and Pete Montgomery, Dot Sandlin and Roy Blair, Method Coe Holmes and Johnnie Carlisle Carlisle. Margaret Hannah Haslam Waldman '39 also joined the groups at the Sheraton and at Homecoming.

Class of '67 Alumna Living in Buenos Aires

By Martha Crocker '87

Leola Merriwether Carver, a native of Atmore, firmly believes that with determination and a good education, anyone can get what he wants out of life.

"If you keep your priorities straight, you can do anything you want to," said the 1967 UM graduate.

Mrs. Carver, her husband Darrel Carver and their two children have expanded their horizons through Carver's international business career which has taken them to Saudi Arabia and Atlanta. They now live in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Her husband of 19 years is vice president for the international staff of Citibank corporation and head of World Corporate Groups, which manages accounts for corporations which deal in several countries.

But Mrs. Carver quickly makes it known that the family's success has not gone to her head.

"I don't want to talk about how successful I've been. Rather, I want to stress that you can do and be anything you want and with determination you can get there from here," she said.

"It has nothing to do with what you have or don't have, but rather how you use your intelligence and other personal attributes."

Mrs. Carver met her husband while doing graduate work at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

"After he got out of the service in Vietnam, he re-entered as a Navy pilot. But he always wanted to work in international business," she said.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Carver taught high school biology, chemistry, French, math and German on an emergency certificate.

"I had no idea what he wanted to do at the time," she said. "We had no money. We knew no people in international business.

"But we were determined that he could do it based on a good degree.

"Some people say you have to be a little dishonest to get where you want to be. While that may be true in some companies, Citibank is absolutely honest. My husband serves the company and his clients with total honesty," she said.

"He had so many friends who said you can't get what you want unless you know somebody in high places, but that's just not so. He was hired directly out of graduate school."

The Carvers were assigned to the Far East but at the last minute were re-assigned to the Middle East.

Carver began training as officer of the bank three weeks after arriving in Saudi Arabia and became vice president after four and a half years.

Then he was transferred to Atlanta, Ga., to work in corporate lending, the same kind of work he now does in Argentina.

"We were very happy living in Atlanta when someone called and asked how we would like to go to Argentina. My kids said 'yes' before they asked 'where,'" Mrs. Carver said.

"We had such a beautiful experience in Saudi Arabia that I had no fear of going anywhere else.

"My husband and I are both Christians. We have never moved anywhere without praying about it together," she said. "Moving overseas was one of the most difficult decisions we have ever made.

"It was hard on our parents taking the children to a foreign country. It was very much a conflict of interests for both parents and grandparents. But the company flies us back once a year to see our families. Citibank is a very good, family-oriented company."

While attending UM, Mrs. Carver majored in biology and chemistry, with a minor in French.

"Montevallo is not one of your big Ivy League schools, but it's a good school nonetheless," she said.

"Montevallo was a very safe place to be. I appreciated the fact that there were not a lot of rich kids flaunting their wealth. Everybody was there for the same reason: to study.

"One of my favorite professors was Dr. Aris Merijanian (now chairman of the chemistry department). He's so demanding. He's an immensely intelligent man. With all that energy, he's just a dynamo," she said.

And she remembers working in the cafeteria for 45 cents an hour to help pay her school expenses.

"I always wanted to be a doctor, but people talked me out of it," said Mrs. Carver.

So she began graduate school as a paid student in biochemistry at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. However, this only lasted a short time.

"Biochemistry was not what I wanted and being a lab technician didn't give me a chance to work with people to the degree that I wanted to," she said.

However, through her husband's career, she now has that contact with people.

"About five years ago I realized that for our kind of lives, it was not fair for me to go through with a career. I had to stay with our family. It was my decision," she said.

"For my husband to be that dedicated to his work, someone had to be home with the family. In foreign countries, it's very important for me to be an official hostess, something I didn't see as much of when we lived in Atlanta. To me, that's exciting and stimulating."

Work Under Way on New Directory

Work has begun on a new UM Alumni Directory, scheduled for publication in June 1988.

The Directory will be published by Harris Publishing Co., a New York firm specializing in top quality alumni directories. It will provide valuable information not only for alumni but also for the Office of Alumni and Development. Compiling the publication also will enable Alumni Affairs to update its records on many alumni.

All alumni will receive a brief questionnaire, followed by a reminder a month later for those who haven't responded. The return of the questionnaires is essential in order for the Directory to be accurate and complete.

A Harris Publishing representative will contact alumni personally to verify the information submitted in the questionnaires and to offer purchasing information.

Alumni who do not respond to the questionnaire or the telephone followup, will appear in the Directory through the latest records in the Alumni Affairs Office.

Adjutant General's UM Connections Numerous

By Bill Plott

When Gov. Guy Hunt named Brig. Gen. Ivan Smith as state adjutant general he didn't realize the old Army Reservist would bring a veritable army of Montevallo connections along with him.

"The way we counted it up, my son Walon is working on the 13th Montevallo degree in our family," said Smith, who holds two of those UM degrees himself (M.Ed. '60 and MAT '78).

"My wife, Sue, has two degrees from Montevallo. Our daughter, Kay, has two degrees, and our daughter, Ruth, has one degree. Our sons-in-law, Kenny Lenoir and Tommy Truss, each have one degree from Montevallo," Smith said. "My wife's sister, Shirley Campbell, and her brothers, Donald Campbell and Bethel Campbell, each have a degree from Montevallo. In fact, Donald taught there for a while."

Smith is one of two UM graduates serving in Hunt's cabinet. (The other is Danny Cooper, director of the Emergency Management Agency). Being one of the two selected was something of a shock, though.

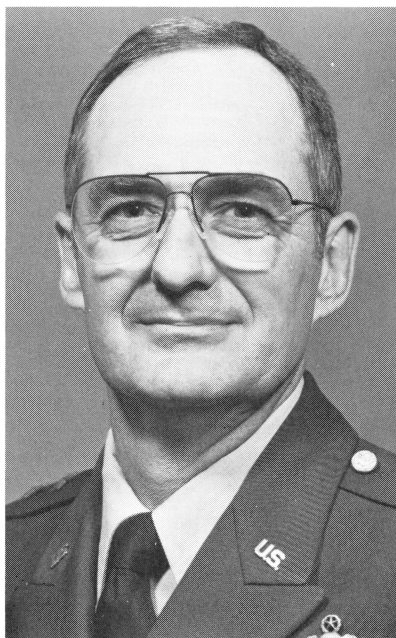

"He (Hunt) came through Clanton and I got a friend to let me talk to him about keeping politics out of the promotion system in the National Guard. I only talked with him for two or three minutes," Smith recalled.

"After he was elected he came to Clanton again and I was invited to submit my resume. That was the first inkling I had that I might be considered. When he hired me, Governor Hunt gave me only one order: Take the politics out of the promotion system."

As adjutant general, Smith administers the National Guard program for the governor. He is accountable for all of the equipment, the training of the troops and the mobilization for state emergencies or federal service.

It's the major events such as tornadoes or civil disorders that give the Guard its highest visibility, but most of its day-to-day work involves only small numbers of people at a time.

"We are almost constantly doing one-, two- and three-person callups for things like when a community runs out of water. We helped haul hay last year during the drought and we had three men in a Blazer in Centreville carrying nurses to the hospital during the ice storm," he explained.

"This spring we put two men on active duty at the Clanton airport with a fuel tanker for the farmers using helicopters to try and save the peach crop. We didn't provide the fuel because we can't do anything that has an economic impact on private business. We just provided the tanker and the men to run it."

In all emergencies, large and small, it is the governor who actually calls the Guard into service. Once that is done, Smith handles the chore of getting the job done.

Smith has been involved with the military for more than three decades, enlisting in the National Guard in 1952 after graduating from Chilton County High School. Following his graduation from Jacksonville State in 1954, he was discharged as a sergeant first class in order to be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the regular Army. He rejoined the Guard in 1957, eventually rising to brigadier general in 1981.

The military background notwithstanding, Smith has been better known in Chilton County as a teacher rather than a soldier.

"The main reason I went to college was to get a commission in the Army. I enjoyed math and history so they became my major and minor. I got into education because it went so well with the ROTC (Reserve Officer Training Corps) program," he said.

A couple of years after graduation, he found himself stationed in Germany and teaching at the University of Maryland center at night. He enjoyed it so much that he spent another 29 years practicing it.

"I taught for 22 years at Chilton County High School and seven at Alexander City Junior College," he said. "I also taught at night at Wallace Junior College in Selma."

"When I first got my M.Ed. at Montevallo, I thought I might want to be a principal but I soon got cured of that ailment.

"I went back later and got my MAT because I needed rejuvenating. I felt a little blah. I needed to get my spark back. Not only did I learn math but also I picked up pointers on teaching. After all, I hadn't seen anybody but myself teach for 22 years. And you don't realize some of the things you do in your teaching. One day a student came up to me after class and asked me if I realized that I used the word 'now' 100 times in my class that day."

In a circuitous fashion, Smith's Montevallo connections began while he was still in high school. His English teacher at Clanton was Sarah Palmer, one of the first recipients of the UM Alumni Board's Outstanding Commitment to Teaching Award.

"When I was a student she was a young teacher and without a doubt she was one of the most professional I ever had. She taught classic manners—how to be lady and a gentleman—while she taught English.

"Later I got my revenge," Smith said, laughing. "I taught her daughter in high school. I'm just kidding about the revenge. Mrs. Palmer's daughter is a very nice, bright lady."

Smith is looking forward to seeing his son, Walon, pick up the family's 13th UM degree sometime in the near future.

"Montevallo's a nice school. I'm pleased that my children wanted to go there," he said.

Early Health Care: Placebos, Providence

By Mary Frances Tipton

"Thanks to a kind Providence, we had no deaths, and were enabled to prevent a panic in the school." So reported Montevallo's second president Dr. Francis Marion Peterson to the Board of Trustees for the school year 1901-02.

Ms. Tipton

In those early years of this century, recovery from serious illness could indeed be attributed to the intervention of Providence, or heredity, or even sheer good luck, because, as Lewis Thomas pointed out in The Youngest Science (Viking Press, 1983), the few useful drugs in existence at that time—digitalis and morphine in particular—were augmented by prescriptions of powdered vegetable compounds dissolved in alcohol. They were only placebos, of course, but so great was their psychological value that they were credited, by doctors and patients, with great curative powers.

As Thomas tells us, a lot of people are bound to get well anyway, in spite of what is done to treat them.

The principal health fear in those days was of contagion—smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria. The vaccine for smallpox was available, and was used at the Alabama Girls Industrial School (as we were called then) as early as 1898 when an epidemic was averted by the alertness of the school's physicians, Dr. D.L. Wilkinson and Dr. Edgar G. Givhan. Lavinia Fuller, a student from LaFayette, came down with what was thought to be smallpox.

The school had been in existence for less than two years and there was no infirmary. There was, however, a house on the outskirts of town that was designated as "the pest house," and there Miss Fuller was bundled. This "pest house" is still standing, by the way, at 239 Ashville Road, the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Gormley. I hasten to add that it was well fumigated after Miss Fuller recovered and left.

School was dismissed for a short time and students were vaccinated and sent home. Ironically, the State Health Officer declared that it was not a case of smallpox but of "varioid," whatever that is. Dr. Wilkinson disagreed, and President Reynolds authorized payment of $2.00 to Ben Bresley to fumigate the dormitory.

At the time of the smallpox scare and for years thereafter, there were very few buildings on campus—the Chapel (Reynolds Hall), the newly constructed west wing of Main Hall, and a couple of temporary frame buildings—no infirmary. Sick students either stayed in their rooms and were visited by the doctor, or were transferred to one of the temporary buildings used to house some of the faculty.

Neither was satisfactory, according to Dr. Wilkinson in his annual report for 1901-02; the faculty house needed considerable repairs, and Wilkinson complained of lack of privacy and "incessant noise in the corridor" and visits from other students "forbids much needed rest and sleep" in the dormitory.

Wilkinson's annual reports make surprisingly interesting reading. They are not dry statistical records, but lively exhortations on cleanliness and disease prevention that give the reader an unexpected picture of early twentieth century college life.

Wilkinson was a conscientious physician well ahead of his time in many respects, especially regarding vaccinations and sanitation. His indignation—at the state of the plumbing in the Dormitory (primitively, to put it delicately, in the early years), poor drainage, wiggle-tails in Gentry Springs which supplied the school's water—could be scathing.

Again and again he advocated the construction of a "steam house" to disinfect bedding, furniture, and personal belongings. "This house can be erected for a cost of not exceeding $100, I think," he wrote. "We have destroyed more than enough mattresses and bedding in the past to pay for several such houses. Pipes run from the boiler into a tightly ceiled (sic) room where a temperature of 212 degrees F can be maintained for 30 or 40 minutes will not only destroy all vermin, but also most germs." I could not find that such a house was ever built. One year he recommended hiring clean-living Scandinavian women as cooks and dormitory workers.

In his report of 1906-07, he gave an overview of his work since his employment in the summer of 1897. Never inclined to modesty, he boasted of seeing over 24,000 patients in 9½ years, treating 85 cases of measles in 1903 (our worst epidemic) and 65 cases of "La Grippe" in 1901. In 1902, he visited one student suffering from "Chronic Pneumonia" a total of 191 times. Minor surgery was performed on rare occasions; serious cases were sent to surgeons at city hospitals.

He introduced a health screening test, stopped the questionable but common practice of administering morphine to alleviate pain, established a "drug department" to fill prescriptions (local "unlicensed" druggists were earning 100 to 300 percent profit on students' prescriptions, Wilkinson claimed), and hired a trained resident nurse.

He noted that there was a dramatic rise in infectious diseases after students returned to school from a visit home. "While I do not suppose the time will ever come when we can stop the girls from coming and going, very nearly every epidemic we have had in the school of measles and chicken pox has been brought to us immediately after the holidays . . . Our chicken pox this year began in this way." Other observations included the fact that girls from the Black Belt were more inclined toward malaria when other students.

Wilkinson's efforts to keep the school disease-free, his progressive theories connecting proper nutrition and exercise to good health, and his emphasis on sound sanitation practices, which included examination of food and water supplies, led to special resolutions of commendation for the school from the State Board of Health and the Alabama Medical Association, the only institution in the state so recognized. Dr. Wilkinson himself was asked to address various national and regional medical groups on his theories and practice at Montevallo.

His most vocal wish was for a proper infirmary. In 1908-09, the newly purchased King House was fitted up for housing the sick, and

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED.

The MISSION of the University of Montevallo is, in part, to provide UM students a "small college" public higher educational experience of high quality... designed for their intellectual and personal growth in the pursuit of meaningful employment and responsible, informed citizenship.

For the Montevallo students listed below, the FIRST STAGE of accomplishing the latter portion of that MISSION is ending in a few days. Soon they will be entering upon a NEW STAGE of experience of the long adventure of learning and earning a living.

At Montevallo, we like to say we are preparing graduates for their LAST jobs—not just their first ones. That's certainly been the case of the members of the Spring Class of 1987. As they soon join in the long procession of Montevallo men and women who have preceded them since 1896, UM faculty and staff feel confident, therefore, in proclaiming MISSION ACCOMPLISHED.

The unique photographic treatment of the University of Montevallo ceremonial mace, composed against a contemporary background, suggests that the strength of our past is not being forgotten as we move into the future. Indeed, in preparing for tomorrow, we are committed not to forget the basic principles contributing to our humanity—such principles as those embedded in: Honor, Industria, Fidelitas, Caritas, Fortitudo, Dedicatio, Responsibilitas, Virtutes.

Each Latin word above was engraved on one of the "borns" on the head of Montevallo's mace by silversmith Herr Dr. Franck Kiss. The mace, engraved also with the founding date of the University, A.D. 1896, is carried by a student leader in five academic ceremonies annually, including graduation and Honors and Founders Day convocations.

The mace is a symbol of our tradition—and of our tomorrow.

WELCOME THE SPRING 1987 GRADUATING CLASS

The UM students whose names are listed below are in the final process of fulfilling requirements for graduation on May 2, 1987—in a ceremony featuring Dr. Robert H. Atwell, President of the American Council of Education. We invite you to join us in saluting them for their ACCOMPLISHMENT—and to welcome them into your personal and professional communities. We at Montevallo believe they will prove to be valued friends, neighbors, colleagues, employees, and citizens.

Vickrey Begins Second Decade at UM

EDITOR'S NOTE: With the passing of the spring semester, University of Montevallo President Dr. Jim Vickrey concluded 10 years as the chief administrator of the university. The following interview was with K. A. Turner, managing editor of The Shelby County Reporter and is reprinted here by permission.

by K.A. Turner

MONTEVALLO—More than anything else, one thing has remained constant through Dr. Jim Vickrey's tenure as president of the University of Montevallo.

"I have loved being here," said Vickrey as he settled onto a comfortable couch in his office in historic Calkins Hall, "and I still love being here.

"I feel like I am completing one decade while starting another and I hope to stay here a while longer. I love raising (son) John here, I love small-town life and I love small-college life."

Vickrey remembered with a smile that, when he came to Montevallo as a young university president a decade ago, many said he would use the university as a "stepping stone" to a bigger position. "I guess most of them see that I didn't feel that way," Vickrey said. "This is not a stepping stone because there isn't anything better than this."

Vickrey characterized the decade just past at UM as one of progress and the discovery of a mission and goals unique to the university. Five R's, Vickrey said, represent what he feels are the university's most important accomplishments during his tenure, some representing very concrete actions and some as full of symbolism as of literal worth.

• Re-asserting Montevallo's unique role in Alabama higher education is perhaps the most important factor currently influencing the university and its community Vickrey began.

"Higher education in Alabama should be seen as a spectrum," Vickrey illustrated. "Our niche is that of a four-year, undergraduate institution unique in what it can offer."

A mission and goals statement developed during Vickrey's tenure is central in keeping the university true to its unique place in Alabama higher education Vickrey said. "No one else aspires to our mission. Our purposes are set."

Vickrey welcomes Dr. Glenda Weathers, English, to reception for new faculty members. Behind him is Neal Lester, also new in the English Department.

The mission is simple yet comprehensive. "The mission of the University of Montevallo, unique in higher education in Alabama," the document says, "is to provide students from throughout the state an affordable, geographically accessible, 'small college' public higher education experience of high quality with a strong emphasis on undergraduate liberal studies and with professional programs supported by a broad base of arts and sciences, designed for their intellectual and personal growth in the pursuit of meaningful employment and responsible, informed citizenship."

Another important factor, Vickrey added, is a re-articulation of the purpose of the college and reminding all Alabamians that purpose continues to predominate all that is done at the university.

That is one of the reasons that as UM president he has continued to be active in such personal pursuits as movie critic.

"Basically I am a reserved sort of person," Vickrey said. "I don't covet the notoriety. One of the reasons I do it is to get another lick in for the university. I believe more people today know Montevallo is here. They are more aware of us than at any time in the history of the school. I can't take all the credit for that, but I believe that every time the university is mentioned it can serve that purpose."

• Secondly, Vickrey said that reaffirming the university's commitment to being small and good rather than being bigger is critical to its success.

"It is no accident that the student/teacher ratio (approximately 14:1) is as good as small private colleges," Vickrey said. "We have a carefully controlled enrollment which enables students to have senior instructors even as freshmen."

• Renewing a commitment by both the school and its board of trustees to seek national accreditation for academic programs whenever such accreditations are available is a key in maintaining the high academic quality of the university, Vickrey said of the school's third major progress point. The UM president noted that, with the accreditation of the college of business which occurred this year, UM has 10 of its 13 major academic programs accredited.

The recent accreditation of the school's art program and the effort to have business accredited reflect, Vickrey said, five years of work toward that goal and makes UM one of only two accredited art programs in the state and will make the university the smallest college in the nation with an accredited business program.

"We will go after accreditation in all of our programs," Vickrey said. "That is an example of the programmatic kind of commitment to quality we make here."

- The re-establishment of academic priorities in decision-making and budgeting is also a key commitment of the current administration Vickrey said. "One of the reasons we have had trouble dealing with two successive years of proration and the current funding cut is that we put most of our money in academic affairs and in faculty salaries," Vickrey said. "It is hard to make cuts in those areas."

That temporary difficulty, Vickrey said however, is yet another evidence that the university's system or priorities is working in keeping most of the monies tied to academics. During his decade as president, Vickrey has seen the university's in-house scholarship fund grow from $25,000 to over $500,000 as a part of a budgeting process that Vickrey said is always open to student and faculty input and scrutiny.

"I have never made a major decision here without student and faculty help in the process," Vickrey said. "I make mistakes, but they are not mistakes made in secret but mistakes made as a part of a very public decision-making process."

- The fifth major accomplishment during Vickrey's tenure may seem, the president said, somewhat less important on the surface. But the restoration of the stairwell in the Main dormitory says a lot, Vickrey feels, about Montevallo's commitment to preservation of the very best in the college's long and storied history in an effort to combine those traditions with future growth.

"We want to build quality step by step," Vickrey said continuing the symbolism of the staircase. "That physical renovation project is important because tradition is important to the university. We must re-discover the best in the university's past, build on it in the present, and look to the future."

That future, Vickrey feels, is a very bright one as Montevallo continues to occupy a unique role in Alabama education. Vickrey's one wish for the university is better funding—funding achieved through a combination of public and private monies which could provide a predictable base from which to plan university programs.

"By better funding I mean the creation of an endowment of private funds and a process of state funding that is sufficiently predictable and rational that supports the university's mission," Vickrey said.

Citing the Vacca Chair of Liberal Arts—the first one of its kind in the state to take advantage of recent eminent scholars legislation—as an example of what endowment funding can bring to the university, Vickrey noted that the first Vacca scholar will arrive on campus in the spring semester. "People in a wide variety of fields can come to the university, teach the students, associate with the faculty, examine our library holdings in their field," Vickrey said of the endowment which will bring scholars to the school to teach on a yearly basis.

A system of public funding, Vickrey said, based not on numerical enrollment and funding formulas but on university mission and pursuit of goals would help Montevallo achieve its aims and give it a predictable source of revenues in years to come.

"And of course we want to continue to attract quality students and increase the number and percentage of quality students," Vickrey said, adding that the university also is taking steps to insure equal opportunities for minorities and women in both faculty and student circles.

Sandra Bond Bowers Heads 1987-88 AF Effort

By Sue Wagener Chosa

When Sandra Bond Bowers '66 finishes her term as annual fund drive chairman, will she still be the Same Sweet Girl?

That question would make her laugh, since "Same Sweet Girls" is what she and a group of classmates call themselves when they meet in Atlanta each year.

"You can't print why we call ourselves that," she said before sharing the story. Suffice to day, it was a phrase they heard during their college years which left a lasting impression.

This year when the Same Sweet Girls gathered in the Georgia metropolis, they sported T-shirts bearing what looked like the University's seal—except the lamp of learning was replaced with a sugar bowl.

Between 15 and 20 alumni have been meeting in Atlanta each spring since 1974. "The first time was a lot of fun, getting caught up," Mrs. Bowers said. "But my favorite year was when we turned 40. It was nice to share that milestone with people who had all turned 40 too."

Maintaining close relations with Montevallo alumni is important to Mrs. Bowers. She has served as class representative and frequently hosts chapter events in her home. The tradition began early.

After graduation, she and four friends from UM moved to Tuscaloosa to teach school. Their jobs were arranged by another classmate's father.

Mrs. Bowers taught first grade in Tuscaloosa County. "This was out in the country," she said. "Some of the children were scared of crayons. They had never seen them before."

After the others moved or married, she and Georgia Spivey Pahland '66 decided to relocate.

"We chose Columbus, Ga., because there were so many soldiers coming and going at Ft. Benning that we figured it would be a lot of fun," she said.

"We never dreamed we'd both end up marrying Army officers."

Sandra Bond became Mrs. Bowers two months after she met Dick, a West Point graduate, in the fall of 1968. "He proposed the night Nixon was elected. We got married that Thursday and on Sunday, he left for Germany," she said.

She joined him a few weeks later in Baumholder, Germany, where he was training for combat duty in Vietnam. "He was in the infantry. They were out in the woods a lot," she said.

Sandra Bond Bowers

She taught school on the Army base. "It's not difficult to teach in an Army school since the parents are required to meet with you if you call them in," she said. "There are no discipline problems, except maybe too much discipline."

Before going to Vietnam, her husband transferred from infantry to finance. He spent his tour of duty in Saigon, overseeing the payroll. "I have pictures of him in a huge room stacked with money," she said.

Mrs. Bowers returned to her parents home in Mobile to earn a master's degree in education from the University of South Alabama.

After a year in Vietnam, Dick Bowers was stationed in Atlanta which the couple now call home. She taught school there until the demands of an invalid grandmother and a small child (Ricky is now 14) made it impossible to work. Her teaching certificate expired and she never returned to the field.

"After being discharged, my husband decided to sell real estate because, unlike the Army, if you work hard you can make lots of money," she said. "Then right before Christmas in 1979, he quit his job to start his own company."

Richard Bowers and Co. sells and leases office buildings and land. It has grown from a three-man operation (Dick, Sandra and a secretary) to include 18 agents and a 10-member support staff in two locations. Mrs. Bowers is the accounting department.

"My official title is secretary-treasurer and sometimes I call myself the comptroller. I couldn't have done it if we hadn't started off small and grown gradually because I was really bad in math at Montevallo," she said.

"The work could be very boring but it's interesting to me because I know the people I'm billing since I've met them at parties we give. Besides, it's my money."

"The only problem is that after eight hours at work, I feel like I've been underground all day," she said. "Bookkeepers never get offices with windows."

Latham Campaign Exceeds Goal

Last year's annual fund campaign ended June 30 having exceeded its $900,000 goal. Chairman Bill Latham '65 announced the final total of $925,017.

Alumni contributions, including deferred gifts, totaled $522,380. Cash given by alumni was $155,089.

Cash gifts from businesses, Falcon Club members, former faculty and staff were particularly strong in 1986-87.

Unrestricted giving accounted for $77,190. "This is an important area of need and will be a major focus in the current campaign," said Alumni and Development Director Mary Lou Williams.

She said this fund gives academic departments flexibility in program and facility enhancement when funding is not available from other sources.

The gift totals of 55 classes were up from the previous year and several classes increased significantly their number of givers and the amount given.

The Class of '44, under the direction of Louise Lovelady Wilson, went from 22 contributors giving $899 to 28 donating $2,830. Pat Brandon's Class of '51 increased the number of givers from 17 to 24 and the amount of contributions from $872 to $1,500.

The Class of '67 experienced a 40 percent increase in the number of donors while the class total tripled.

Other particularly successful efforts mentioned by Ms. Williams included the classes of 1959, 1965, 1968, 1970, 1972, 1977, 1978, 1982 and 1985.

The 1987-88 annual fund drive is now underway, edging toward the first $1 million goal in UM's history.

Heading the campaign is Atlantan Sandra Bond Bowers '66.

Commission Begins Study Of Faculty Governance

A 12-person presidential commission has been appointed to study faculty governance at the University of Montevallo.

Dr. Frank McCoy, academic grand marshal and chairperson of the UM Art Department, will chair the Commission of Faculty Governance, according to an announcement by President Jim Vickrey.

"The charge of the Commission is at once simple and complex," Vickrey said in a memo to its members. "It is, simply put, to study faculty governance on the campus and to make at least a preliminary report to me by April 1, 1988. It is, more particularly, to consider and make recommendations to me, eventually, regarding answers to four questions." Briefly, they are:

1. How does faculty governance at UM compare (for better and/or for worse) with that of similar or peer colleges and universities?

2. In what specific ways can faculty governance at UM be improved to enhance the role of UM faculty in campus governance, both in fact and in perception?

3. Has the time yet come at UM to establish college-wide and University-wide Faculty Personnel Committees to make recommendations, for example, on such matters as annual tenure and promotion decisions?

4. Does the University need a Standing Committee on the Budget to advise me on matters financial, a Mission and Goals and/or Futures Committee to advise me on institutional direction and alternative futures, or any other special body (e.g., a Centennial '96 Committee)?

Vickrey said "faculty governance" includes all aspects of faculty participation in decision-making at Montevallo.

Vickrey established the commission in response to a recent recommendation of the Faculty Council, which determined last year that it lacked the resources to do such a governance study.

"This was obviously a task that needed University-wide resources," McCoy said of the appointment of the Commission. He said not only will the Commission draw from its own members but also will involve a wide range of other faculty, staff and students from throughout the University community in its study and, if necessary, consultants from elsewhere.

The other Commission members include Loretta Brown, Communications Science and Disorders; Jerri Bullard, Sociology; George Codone, Student Government Association president; Maury Clabaugh, Business; Elaine Elledge, Student Support Services; Collette Garrison, Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance; Lucille Griffith, history faculty emeritus; George Inzer, Mass Communications; David Martin, Education; Jim Rogers, Psychology; and Debra-Lenise Woodward, English. The faculty members were recommended by the Faculty Council.

"The plan is really to come out with two reports over about a year's period," McCoy said. "The first will involve the entire University community and its purpose will be to look at present faculty governance. The first report, thus, would be on the current state of things."

"The second phase," McCoy continued, "is really a phase of examining alternative governance systems or structures. That will involve looking at other schools and universities. Then, we will go to the faculty and say this is what we have, and these are some of the options available."

"We will come up with a consensus on the type of governance that we think would function best here. We will present that consensus to the president, and he has assured me that he has no model in mind for our faculty governance."

In pursuing its objectives Vickrey urged the Commission "to consider how faculty governance can be improved at the departmental, college and University levels" as well as within existing structures such as standing committees and Faculty Council.

"I am pleased that Dr. McCoy and the other members of the governance commission have agreed to take on this important responsibility," Vickrey said this week, "and I look forward to seeing the fruits of its handiwork."

John Blackwell

Blackwell Is Newest Vice President

UM Treasurer John Blackwell has been named vice president for facilities and financial affairs, President Jim Vickrey announced.

Vickrey said that the promotion was the last major step in the reorganization process begun in 1977, in part, to decrease the number of persons reporting directly to the president's office.

As vice president, Blackwell's responsibilities include supervision of all areas formerly included in business affairs as well as those constituting physical plant operations.

The 45-year-old Decatur native who graduated from Scottsboro High School joined the Montevallo administration in 1977 as treasurer and business manager. His was one of the first appointments that Vickrey made after becoming UM president 10 years ago.

Symphony to Perform On Flowerhill Lawn

The Alabama Symphony Orchestra will perform on the lawn of Flowerhill, the president's residence, Oct. 2 from 6:30-8 p.m. The public is invited to the free concert.

Those attending should bring blankets or lawn chairs and picnic dinners in order to make themselves at home on the grounds of the 61-year-old residence of Montevallo presidents.

UM President Jim Vickrey is a member of the ASO Board of Directors.

"It has been an exciting and challenging 10 years. I hope this promotion will give me a better opportunity to serve the University," Blackwell said.

Blackwell has years of experience in higher education and private business. He was named treasurer and assistant business manager of Livingston University after graduating from Auburn in 1964.

He also worked as sales manager for several Alabama companies and served as an administrator with the Scottsboro City Schools. He and his wife owned a home furnishing and decorating service in Scottsboro prior to coming to Montevallo.

Blackwell and his wife, the former Tommie Ruth Boroughs, reside in Montevallo. They have three sons: Taylor, 21, and Slade, 18 (who enters UM in the fall), and Austin, 6.

Cost-saving Program Wins National Award

The University of Montevallo is one of a dozen U.S. institutions of higher education to receive top national recognition for a cost-saving program which has reduced health insurance premiums for its faculty and staff.

A Cost Reduction Incentive Award of $250 was presented to UM Vice President John Blackwell at the annual meeting of the National Association of College and University Business Officers (NACUBO).

"It is gratifying that the University has received national recognition in a program co-sponsored by the United States Steel Corporation and is one of only two state institutions to do so," said Blackwell.

"We were most pleased to receive this award, especially since it is for a wellness-related project and in a totally different field from the national award UM received a couple of years ago for our wood-waste boiler system."

Montevallo's Wellness Credits Program provides UM personnel with three health-related options designed to lower increasing insurance costs.

Faculty and staff members and their spouses can earn monthly credits of $3 each for buckling their seat belts, $5 each for maintaining a minimum amount of body fat and $8 each for abstaining from tobacco use.

Signed pledges and annual health screenings monitor the voluntary program which has attracted 85 percent participation since it was introduced last fall.

"John Blackwell's imaginative ideas for cutting costs and saving the University and its personnel money are myriad," UM President Jim Vickrey said, "and I am pleased that NACUBO has recognized thus one of his most creative."

Trudy McGuire

Trudy McGuire Gets Additional Duties, Title

Trudy McGuire, assistant to the president for faculty/staff relations, has been named associate vice president for institutional research at UM.

In her new position, she will provide the University with statistical information about all aspects of UM to be used in planning and decision-making.

She will also compile data needed for grant applications and accreditation as well as information requested by governmental or educational agencies such as the Alabama Commission on Higher Education.

Dr. McGuire will continue her duties as coordinator of the University's equal opportunity/affirmative action program and as liaison for faculty and staff relations.

"We are so pleased to have Dr. McGuire working in institutional research," said Vice President John Blackwell. "I think she will do a great job."

The Carlisle, Ky., native held faculty positions at Eastern Kentucky University, the University of Tennessee and Knoxville College before coming to UM in 1971 as associate professor of business.

She was one of the first three University Scholars selected in 1978. Since 1980, she has served as assistant to the president, equal opportunity coordinator and professor of business.

She received a bachelor of arts degree from Union College in Kentucky in 1961, a master's degree from Eastern Kentucky University and a doctor of education degree from the University of Tennessee in 1970. She is the co-author of two business textbooks, one to be published in the fall.

Dr. McGuire and her husband, Robert, a biology professor at UM, live in Montevallo.

Founders Day Set Oct. 8

The University will celebrate its 91st Founders Day on Oct. 8 with a variety of activities.

The annual event will begin with a prayer breakfast at 8:30 a.m. in the Anna Irvin Dining Hall. The guest speaker will be the Rt. Rev. Robert O. Miller.

An open house at the Center for Excellence is scheduled for 10 a.m.

At 11 a.m., the Founders Day Convocation will get underway, celebrating: "1987-1996: A Decade of Developments to Come." UM President Jim Vickrey will speak.

The "Outstanding Commitment to Teaching Award" will be presented by Tom Walker '75, president of the UM National Alumni Association. The University Scholar will also be named. Another feature will be the robing of seniors.

The Alumni Association kicks off its 1987-88 Annual Fund Drive at a luncheon following the convocation. The event is scheduled to begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Anna Irvin Dining Hall.

This year's speaker will be Sandra Bond Bowers '66, chairwoman of the fund drive.

The afternoon of Founders Day will feature the dedication of the Foreign Language Lab at 2:15 p.m. and a reception in Main Foyer at 3:15 p.m. honoring President Jim Vickrey's 10 years of service.

Faye Lovelady tries on cap and gown for summer commencement exercises at which she received her BS degree, culminating a college career that began in 1970. Mrs. Lovelady pursued her degree while raising a family and working fulltime as a UM secretary in the alumni office, library, home economics department and student development division over the years.

Meet 'n' Mingle Week

Montevallo students returning to or just beginning campus life were greeted with a week of activities sponsored by the Division of Student Affairs.

The activities began Aug. 31 at Monday's Meet-'n-Mingle event in front of the SUB. The traditional Coke booth was set up to provide free drinks and offer students and officials a gathering place to meet and talk informally.

Take-off Tuesday provided an afternoon of fun and games, beginning with wacky relays and live music. A volleyball challenge saw campus organizations and departments facing each other across the net in the Main Quad. The day ended with an outdoor picnic.

Talk-about-it Thursday encouraged students to learn about campus organizations by awarding them tickets for talking to club representatives. Those tickets were later redeemed for ice cream cones and prizes.

The week provided students and campus officials with the opportunity to meet and talk in relaxed settings in order to develop friendly working relationships.

Remember the long lines at Registration? They're a thing of the past now as UM moves into computerized Registration in which most students are actually pre-registered and pay their fees before reporting to campus for the new semester. Short lines like these for schedule changes and late registration were the scene this fall.

MATCHING GIFTS

One of the healthy signs of concern for higher education is the program of matching gifts that has been adopted by many industries and businesses throughout the United States. Under this program, a contribution by an employee of his Alma Mater is matched by the participating company. Contributors to the Annual Fund who may have questions regarding the matching gifts program should feel free to write the Director of Development and Alumni Relations at the University of Montevallo.

Foundation Does Second Cobb Play

By Bill Plott

On the surface it would seem that English Professor Bill Cobb's nine weeks in New York were wasted. He didn't see a single Broadway show or go to any of the museums and tourist attractions. He didn't even get to see a major league baseball game—unthinkable for a serious baseball fan like Cobb.

But Cobb wouldn't have it any other way. The nine weeks he spent there during the past spring and summer resulted in two of his plays being staged by the H.B. Playwrights Foundation Theatre, an organization dedicated to showcasing the works of new authors.

Cobb's latest effort, A Place of Springs, was performed June 27-July 10, capping off an extraordinary year in which the UM creative writing teacher has also seen his second novel published.

"It's been a pretty heady experience," Cobb said, mentioning Celeste Holm, Fritz Weaver, Rochelle Oliver, among the actors he met and socialized with.

"I had two days off that whole 5½ weeks the second play was being done. One was July 4th. Loretta (Cobb, also a UM English professor) and I went out to dinner and rested. The other was one night during rehearsals when they were hanging lights," he recalled. "Every other day I was either rewriting or at rehearsal. I did go to some book stores and I socialized some, especially with theatre people who would come to see what we were doing at HB. We'd go out afterward and talk about it.

"I had dinner one night with Tina Smith, who is a Montevallo graduate ('80). She and Cam Watson '83 came to see the play. They are both doing very well in the theatre and were very excited to see another Montevallian in New York. And Becky Gantt ('59), who lives in New York, came to both plays," he added.

He also had a good bit of support from the home front. A group of 17

Loretta and Bill Cobb, left, greet Montevallo visitors Mary Frances Tipton, Grady Nichols and Suzanne Nichols outside HB Playwrights Foundation Theatre.

UM faculty and staff and Montevallo area people went to New York to see Cobb's first play, Sunday's Child, performed in May to standing room only audiences. English Department Chairman Norman McMillan, his wife Joan, and Marty and Janice Everse of Helena returned for the second play in July.

During the staging of Sunday's Child, director Marelene Mancini read the script of A Place of Springs. She liked it and so did others at the Foundation. They had an open slot on their summer schedule and told Cobb they wanted to do the second play.

"I was scheduled to teach the first term of summer school. I told Norman McMillan what had been proposed and he said he would work something out and he did. I was able to wait and teach the second term. In fact, as soon as the run ended, I came right back to Montevallo to teach," Cobb said.

For Cobb, teaching in summer school was of economic importance as well as academic importance. New York is an expensive place to live, even for a few weeks, and he got no royalties from the productions, just an opportunity to showcase his talent.

"Jim Rogers, an old friend from Demopolis, has a townhouse on Riverside Drive and he very generously and graciously allowed me to stay at his townhouse during both plays. It was three separate trips to New York over a period of nine weeks. He made it possible for me to do it, because otherwise the expenses would have been prohibitive," Cobb said.

Like the playwright, the actors in H.B. Playwrights Foundation Theatre productions work for free. While the stars in A Place of Springs were not as famous as those in Sunday's Child, they still had impressive credits.

Amy Wright who was in Breaking Away, Stardust Memories and Wise Blood played the female lead. She was on Broadway in The Fifth of July. Gary Cookson who has done a lot of television work played the male lead.

"It's another family drama about the difficulty of communicating, especially during disruptive periods in middle age," Cobb said of his latest work. "It doesn't have the same sense of reconciliation and resolution that Sunday's Child had. It doesn't have that element that I think makes Sunday's Child such a satisfying play.

"This one leaves you hanging a little bit more at the end but some said they preferred it. They think it's a better play. I'm not sure what I think about it because I've been revising it since I got home and am just now finishing up a copy to send to my agent in New York.

"In fact, I had not even heard it read aloud until it was read in New York. I didn't know how effective it would be. That's why I had to do so much rewriting while I was up there. I rewrote the entire second act and shortened it considerably. I changed one character's whole role in the play practically. They were changes that were needed, but they were the kinds of things you don't realize until you hear it read aloud and get to see it done on stage."

CHAPTER NOTES

National Alumni Association President-Elect Tom Walker '74 presents President Jim Vickrey with a gift from the association during an August Alumni Leadership Retreat. The gift was in recognition of Vickrey's 10th anniversary at UM. Looking on are Elizabeth Mitchell '35, Nathalie Moulton Gibbons '30, Margie McNeill Nichols '77, Christine Griffin Callahan '41 and UM Prof. Priscilla Cooper.

The home of Mary Scott ("Scotty") Gamble Breen '58 in Huntsville was the site for the Madison County alumni chapter's annual ice cream social on August 4. Invitations were extended by area alumni to incoming and returning UM students. The event gave freshmen a chance to meet and talk with upperclassmen about the campus and what to expect during their first few weeks of school. It also gave the alumni an opportunity to meet students who will soon join them as UM graduates.

Officers of the chapter who were present were: Judy Spofford Elmes '66, president; Sabine Wlodarski '78, vice president; Valeria Valdes Breen '85, secretary; and Anne Weldy Sparks '53, reporter. ## Alumni Directory Out in Spring

The long-awaited alumni directory has been tentatively scheduled for release in March or April. Telephone representatives from the Harris Publishing Company will conduct telephone follow-ups beginning Dec. 2 to verify the information to be printed. At the same time, they will invite alumni to order personal copies of the volume.

Since the cost of publishing the directory is taken care of through directory sales, these phone calls will be made by the Harris Company with the approval of the Alumni Office. The entire project will be undertaken at virtually no cost to UM and, as a by-product, Harris will provide the University with complete, updated alumni records.

The telephone call will be a follow-up to two questionnaires you should have received by that time. If you do not receive the questionnaires, please contact the UM Alumni Office at (205) 665-6215.

Scholarship Highlights Olympics Day

The announcement of a major scholarship in his honor was the highlight of an evening of surprises for President Jim Vickrey at the Olympics Day barbecue dinner Aug. 1.

Dr. Joe Brindley, vice president for university and public affairs, announced the endowment of the Dr. James F. Vickrey Jr. Scholarship, which will be funded by a $10,000 donation from an anonymous donor. The scholarship was created in honor of Vickrey's 10th anniversary at UM. He was inaugurated on Aug. 1, 1977.

The details of the scholarship were left up to Vickrey, who has decided to award $1,000 a year for four years to the student body president of Robert E. Lee High School in Montgomery. Vickrey was student body president at Lee in 1959. A new recipient will be chosen every four years and Vickrey said he will match every additional $1 donation with $2, up to $1,000.

At the barbecue, the president also received a video camera and a new silver chain for the Montevallo medallion from the trustees and his staff. Dessert included a special 10th anniversary cake from the UM cafeteria.

Approximately 100 alumni returned to participate in the 21st annual Olympics Day activities. A highlight of the competition was the presentation of trophies to both the oldest and youngest people to ever win at the event.

Paul Jones, 76, former manager of the UM bookstore and one of the state's top ranked senior tennis players, continued to dominate play, winning first place awards in both singles and doubles. Leigh Anne Dunlavy, 11, daughter of Olympics Day founder Darold Dunlavy '72, won the women's singles title and then teamed up with her uncle, Dean Dunlavy, to win the mixed doubles.

The Alpha Tau Omega fraternity again took advantage of the weekend

Rebecca Gantt Finds Pleasure in Music Again

By Bill Plott

Rebecca Gantt '59, who had not given music a great deal of thought since her College Night days, finds herself now performing before live audiences and loving every minute of it.

"I have a minor in music. I had started when I was a child with piano and then I took voice lessons in high school and continued in college. But then, I didn't do anything with it for a long time except to rent a piano," Ms. Gantt said.

The rekindled interest came when she changed jobs in 1985, going to work for Phillip Morris in New York City as a research specialist.

"Phillip Morris had a chorale and I got interested in it. Since then, I've auditioned for the Village Light Opera Group and they accepted me. I auditioned also for the Rebecca Scott Singers, a group of about 14 singers with our director from Phillip Morris, and was accepted. Next year, we hope to tour in Europe," she explained.

Ms. Gantt is an epidemiologist with Phillip Morris, which owns General Foods, Miller Beer and real estate developments in the West as well as its more familiar tobacco products.

"The word comes from the study of epidemics, but I'm a chronic disease epidemiologist, things like heart disease and diabetes. I was hired here to look at rates and trends and follow commodities, very much like a business epidemiologist. I keep up with all information in all media about any kind of health concerns. I look at what's going on, what's being said about it and what's actually happening."

That's a long way from Montevallo where she was an English major and a kind of Renaissance Person minor.

"I actually accumulated more credits than I needed to finish. I had several minors. I just got interested in a lot of things like art, music and history," she said.

"After I finished at Montevallo, I went over to the University of Alabama and got another bachelor's degree, with a major in biology and a minor in psychology. I finished in two and a half years. Then, I worked for a while and went back to graduate school at Johns Hopkins where I got my degree in epidemiology."

Later she worked as a medical writer with American Home Products, which owns Lux Foods and Ekco, the company that makes all of the kitchen gadgets sold in supermarkets.

But it was joining Phillip Morris that not only got her back into music but also got her on Broadway itself last fall.

"When I got in the chorale at Phillip Morris, our music director, Rebecca Scott, said, 'Why don't we do an original show?' She knew this brilliant young fellow over at Julliard (School of Music) named Scott Eyerly. He was sponsored by Phillip Morris to write a show for the chorale," Ms. Gantt said.

Eyerly was sent into the hills of Virginia and the Southern flatlands for several weeks to talk to people and visit colleges and universities like Berea in Kentucky where old Southern traditions are preserved.

"He came back and wrote this musical called On Blue Mountain. It takes place in the 1930s and concerns mountain people and farmers, country people," she continued. "I played the leading woman's part—an old mountain woman with three sons, one of those very strong Southern women who seems to come across harsh, but that's really all she knows. She is tender inside."

The production was staged on Broadway at the Town Hall Theatre last fall.

"We put it on for two nights, but we should have put it on longer because we couldn't seat everyone who wanted to see it. It was standing room only both nights," she said.

Phillip Morris and Eyerly agreed to make the musical available to non-professional groups at a low cost and created tapes to give a sample of what the music was like. Within two weeks, they had about a hundred requests.

"It was supposed to have been done by a Shakespeare group in Lexington, Ky., and Scott went down to see it. They were the first group to do it after we did it. It got rained out after about the first two songs and I haven't heard if they were able to pick it up again or not," Ms. Gantt said.

Her theatre background at Montevallo included writing and directing College Night productions, playing Laura in The Glass Menagerie and a smaller role in The Crucible. Getting back into the arts actively has been a special experience.

"I love it. I don't know how I did without being emersed in it for so long," she said.

Does her success foreshadow another career change down the road? "I don't know," she said. "I had a lot of encouragement from this show to go ahead with the theatre, but I wouldn't say what's going to happen to me tomorrow. I just try to live one day at a time."

If she gets tired of studying diseases and singing, she can always look into art. Ms. Gantt said she started painting again about a year before resuming singing. No shows yet, but she has sold some paintings.

McCoy and fellow Peace Corps volunteer with villagers.

Liberal Arts Grad Works With Pigs, Chickens, Poverty

By Martha Crocker '87

His village has no electricity. The houses are palmboard shacks with thatched roofs. Water is supplied by the nearby river.

Yet for Kevin McCoy '83, Peace Corps volunteer, the village is his home. He moved to this area of the Dominican Republic to be closer to the people for whom he works.

"The Dominicans are very friendly, understanding and open. They're willing to take you in," he said.

"Their life consists of working in the gardens and clearing fields for their neighbors. Whatever they come home with is what their family lives on, whether it's a sack of tubers, yuca or cash. They can go a week without getting anything. And the family just makes do until the next form of payment comes along."

McCoy manages an animal husbandry program, working with two community associations to generate food and income by raising chickens and pigs.

Although animal husbandry may seem far removed from the art history degree McCoy earned from UM in 1983, he feels that he has been able to apply some of what he learned as an undergraduate.

"I was a generalist with no specific skills," he said. "But I had qualities such as an open mind and a certain amount of versatility which I developed as a liberal arts major."

"I didn't really have any technical skills but I did have people skills and community organization skills."

"I like the idea of being able to work on my own, not having a supervisor standing over me. I only see my supervisor in animal husbandry every couple of months," he said.

McCoy brought in the first chicks for the poultry project when he arrived at the Dominican Republic last April.

The ladies' association which grows the chickens had previously cultivated rice and made candy to raise money.

"These birds have been bred to achieve market weight of four pounds in eight weeks," McCoy said, "but only if they have a balanced ration, medicine and the vitamin supplements they need."

He helps the ladies cut costs by showing them how to make their own feed ration, as well as how to measure the nutrient value.

"They don't use scales. Some of the women can't even read. So they use handfuls for measuring," he said.

The pig raising project, which takes place up in the hills near a village called San Rafael, was started by volunteers who preceded McCoy after an epidemic of swine flu hit the island.

"The military had to wipe out the pig population," he said. "So the Dominicans started importing 'gremo' pigs from the United States."

"The native pigs had survived off looting and were acclimated. But these animals need a lot more attention because of their breeding.

"These pigs can't be allowed to run wild. They wouldn't survive in that area, in that climate," he said.

A large amount of his work is teaching the Dominican men to keep the pigs in a clean pen with fresh water.

McCoy recently moved to a barrio, which he describes as a neighborhood "like its own little world."

"The house I did live in had electricity and running water but sometimes it was more frustrating than not having it," he said. "Water and electricity would go out for weeks on end and you wound up still going to the river to get your water."

McCoy said his flexibility has helped him work in the different culture.

"It took a long time to get used to Dominican tardiness. I was told to expect the men to be as much as a half hour late for meetings," he said.

"The first time I had a 3 o'clock meeting with them, they showed up at 5:30. I spent the whole time talking with the man who was hosting the meeting in his home. The next time, I showed up at 4 for the 3 o'clock meeting. They'd already had the meeting and left. It's frustrating sometimes."

Living in the Dominican Republic has also changed McCoy's perspective on poverty. "I thought it just meant that people didn't have things," he said.

"Poverty breeds a lot of crime and deception. A lot of basic survival instincts come out in you," he said.

"In Third World countries, Americans are seen as rich and therefore they are targets for con artists, people who want to cheat you because they think you can afford it.

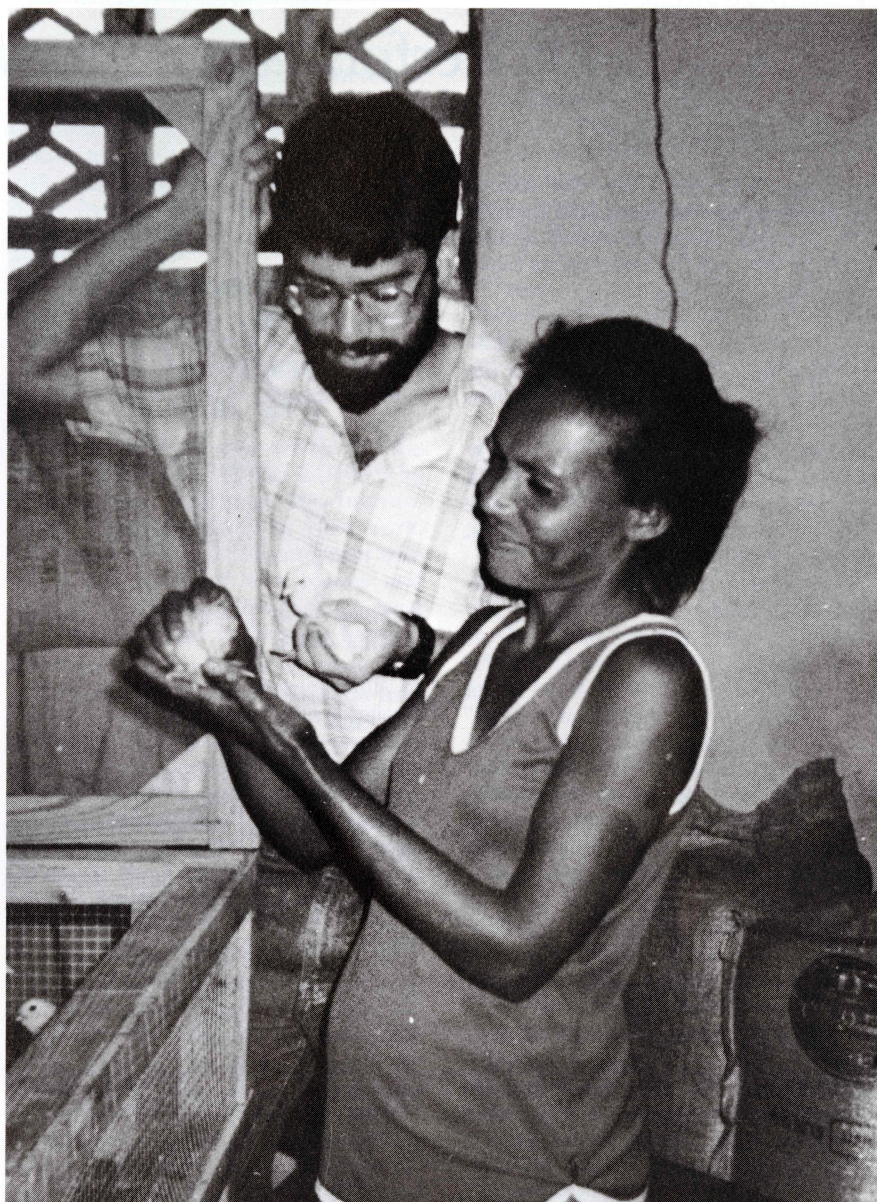

"Volunteers are always given enough to live on, although most Americans probably wouldn't consider it a lot. I get less than $200 a month," he said.

"There's also the frustration of knowing that I can never be completely accepted by the community. I have a lot of things they don't have—a regular income, an education, I'm leaving in two years."

"I feel like I'm in a fishbowl all the time. I'm constantly being stared at because of my white skin," he said.

"The Dominicans have very little need for privacy. If you're living all alone, they send their children to sleep with you. It's hard to find time just for yourself.

"There's also the language barrier. Since I came in with just a minimal knowledge of Spanish, what the Dominicans said was just sounds for the longest time," he said.

What does he do in his spare time?

"I sweep tarantulas out of my house."

"Really, you don't think about things like that after a while," he said. "There are rats and tarantulas and you really do sweep them out. You get used to them. They're very commonplace."

McCoy plans to begin gardening and working on the problem of malnutrition as he returns to the island.

"Malnutrition, diarrhea and parasites are killers, yet they are problems we never think about in America," he said.

He told of an American nursing student who had come to observe the medical clinic.

"Some of the people there asked her how we do things in the U.S. like treat parasites. She didn't know because she hasn't studied that here," he said.

"We're so advanced that we don't even think about things now that are killing other people."

Rebecca Luker Performances Drawing Rave Reviews

By Danny Gamble '87

Actress Rebecca Luker '84 insists she is ready for mature, leading-lady roles. But her blonde ponytail, sparkling blue eyes and lightning-quick manner of speaking belie her 26 years.

Ms. Luker, who majored in vocal performance at UM, was in town during the summer to play Nanette in the Birmingham Summerfest production of "No, No, Nanette."

"Nanette is younger than me by about five years," she said. "She's real perky, unlike me. I don't think I've ever gotten into those teenage roles, even at Montevallo."

Despite her protests, Ms. Luker's girl-next-door freshness and silvery soprano have garnered her best reviews.

Writing in "Opera News," Critic Nancy Malitz said, "Rebecca Luker was child-beautiful and sweet-voiced" in the Michigan Opera Theatre's "A Little Night Music." New York critic Terry Miller wrote about her role in Town Hall's production of "Music in the Air," "Rebecca Luker offered a Siglinde with the requisite innocence."

Ms. Luker revived the part of Nanette at Summerfest, having sung the role in a concert performance at Carnegie Hall in her adopted hometown, New York.

"We stood in front of the orchestra, read from the book and sang the songs," she explained. "I loved doing it again at Summerfest. Acting the part, with all the activity of movement on the stage, seems easier for me."

Ms. Luker began her musical career at 17 when she entered the Alabama Junior Miss Pageant.

"There was never any doubt about what I was going to do for the talent competition," she said. "I couldn't twirl a baton, so I had to sing."

She placed first runner-up in the competition and won the scholarship that brought her to UM.

At the University she studied voice under music professor Benjamin Middaugh.

"Her voice is her main thrust," said Middaugh. "but she's a good actress and dancer, too. She has a beautiful, melodious speaking voice. She reminds me of a young Shirley Jones."

During her stay at UM, Ms. Luker performed in several musicals with the Lyric Theatre, including "Oklahoma!," "The Music Man" and "Camelot."

"Being at a small school helped," she said modestly. "With less people to

I've been lucky, I've never had to wait tables.'

Rebecca Luker

compete with I was able to get the leading roles."

A versatile soprano, Ms. Luker has also appeared in opera productions by the Lake George Opera, the Michigan Opera Theatre and UAB's Town and Gown Theatre. But musical theatre remains her first love.

"I'm not really an opera singer," she said. "Maybe in five years when my voice matures I'll do more opera. I'd eventually love to do the lead in an opera."

Ironically, Ms. Luker was discovered in the opera "Sweeney Todd" staged by the Michigan Opera Theatre. It was there that she met her New York agent, Bret Adams, who was in town to see one of his clients, singer Judy Kaye.

"Bret heard me sing and the following week sent me a letter saying he wanted to represent me," she said. "I hadn't even planned to go to New York."

But she did, and almost immediately began performing in the city and hitting the road for a constant string of appearances in regional theatre.

"I've been lucky," she said. "I've never had to wait tables."

Although content with the stage, Ms. Luker someday hopes to branch out into film and television. She got her start, so to speak, when she recently filmed a commercial for Anacin.

"Doing that commercial was a lot different from doing stage work," she said. "They had to take shots from every possible angle and the people from Anacin were there giving their advice."

"I don't have a starring role in the commercial," she added. "I'm an extra, part of an aerobics class. You don't even see my face."

She said that she hopes this limited exposure will help her find more work in television and film. And she's not limiting herself to New York.

"I have agents working for me in L.A.," she said. "They send me on auditions when I'm out there. I've been seen for a few things."

As for her anticipated leading-lady role, Ms. Luker's big break may come early next year in Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Phantom of the Opera."

"At this time I'm in the ensemble and have been picked as the understudy for the lead," she said. "The lead will be here for six months. Then the producer wants an unknown to take over the part."

"As of now I haven't even seen the contract, so I may be counting my chickens..."

By Robert and Joan Cowan

It was with great expectation that we visited Geoge H. de Mendelssohn-Bartholdy. Not only a direct descendent of Paul Mendelssohn, brother of the famous nineteenth-century composer Felix Mendelssohn, he is the president of Pantheon Music International, a company which produces and markets classical recordings. Previously, he had been the founder and president of Vox Productions, introducing a new marketing concept, the "Vox Box," a collection of LP records contained in a box with the repertoire being in some manner related.

There has to be a meeting of the minds between those who wish to record and those who wish to put their label on a recording, assuming the latter desire to use the artists and the artists desire to be associated with the company. Of paramount importance is repertoire.

Our five previous recordings on disc, selected portions of which have been released on four cassettes, include compositions by Barlow, Riegger, Berezowsky, Persichetti, Reizenstein, Clementi, Schumann, Poulenc, and Milhaud. Somehow, we hadn't recorded much Romantic music, which we wanted to do, and our plan, which we put to Mr. Mendelssohn, was to record the two suites of Rachmaninoff, a total of 45 minutes of music. Imagine our surprise, after talking with him for an hour, to be commissioned to find enough Russian music for three discs, a la the "Vox Box," for a total of 180 minutes of music! (He also made the stipulation that there be only one composition per composer.)

Thus began our detective hunt, which turned out to be lengthy, challenging, and great fun. Already included in our own personal library were works by Rachmaninoff, Stravinsky, Khachaturian, Tcherepnin, Gliere, and Arensky, but these together totaled slightly less than 80 minutes. We searched through catalogues and books, wrote publishers, and tried to get the name of every two-piano or four-hand one-piano Russian composition that we could. Next, to get the music!

Of the compositions which we eventually recorded, the Glazunoff FANTASIE, though published by Belaieff in Frankfort, was obtained through the parent company, C.F. Peters in New York.

We decided to use seven of the FIFTY RUSSIAN FOLK SONGS by Tchaikovsky, published by International Music Company in New York, gratified to find that the composer who wrote no works for two pianos and very few for solo piano had at least set these poignant little gems for four hands.

It seemed logical where possible to contact family members of composers regarding their compositions, and this resulted in the recording of the works of Shostakovich and Lopatnikoff.

Maxim Shostakovich, the composer's son who defected from the Soviet Union to the United States after his father's death in 1975 and who is presently Conductor and Music Director of the New Orleans Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, mentioned to us the CONCERTINO, which was published by Sikorski in Frankfort and came through Theodore Presser in Philadelphia.

It was known to us that Nicolai Lopatnikoff had died in Pittsburgh. Through long distance information we ascertained that his widow still lived there and were able to speak with her by telephone. It turned out that she was from Anniston, Alabama, was a poet, and had met Lopatnikoff at the MacDowell Colony in Peterboro, New Hampshire. She was able to give us the name of Lopatnikoff's biographer, and he told us about the ARABESQUE which was an arrangement by the composer of a movement from his SYMPHONY NO. 2. Since the work was out of print, the publisher, Associated, supplied us with an archival edition.

For Englishmen, in order to be able to use the facilities of the British Library (housed in the British Museum) it is necessary to be recommended by a current member and go through a waiting period of a year. However, for foreigners, it is possible to immediately receive a five-day pass in the form of an identification card, complete with photograph of the bearer. We were looking for the FANTASY of Anton Rubinstein, which we found, and made arrangements at the Museum for it to be microfilmed. Ten days later it arrived in Montevallo.

Such promptness was not to be the case in our procurement of the Glinka CAPRICCIO, however! We had written to P. Jurgensen Music Publishers in Moscow, inquiring about several works. Seven months later, along with a short letter in Russian, came a one-inch stack of complimentary xeroxed music which included the Glinka.

After talking with a number of people, we found a musicologist on the staff of Broude Brothers, a publisher in New York no longer in business, who had a contact in Leningrad. Through this avenue we obtained, after about six months, the Borodin TARANTELLA on microfilm.

Now that our repertoire was set, all we had to do was learn it and get it in the can (as they say in the recording business). The only decision left to be made was where to record.

Having had our own two German Steinways since 1969, there was no question regarding the make of instrument upon which we wished to record. Mr. Mendelssohn indicated to us that he did the bulk of his European recording in Stuttgart, West Germany. Since his most trusted and able recording engineer lived there (who has 5,000 discs to his credit and with whom we became very close after spending twenty-four hours under his microphones over a period of two years) and there was an acoustically outstanding small concert hall in which to record (pianos taken for granted), it seemed the ideal place to go.

Actually, when we arrived in Stuttgart at the end of May, 1983, it was idyllic. The concert hall turned out to be in a retirement home on the outskirts of the city which was operated by the Deutsche Bank, complete with extensive rose gardens and an outdoor chess set with pieces four feet high. Our hotel, modern though small, was a mile from the hall and run by a man and his wife, the former an outstanding Swiss chef. It was spargel season, a time of the year when there is great celebration at the appearance of the asparagus, kept white and pure by women going out in the fields every morning and mounding up the dirt around the stalks so the sun won't get to the tender young shoots and turn them green. The food was so wonderful, and we ate so much of it (we finally had to go to the grocery store and buy

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED.

The MISSION of the University of Montevallo is, in part, to provide UM students a "small college" public higher educational experience of high quality... designed for their intellectual and personal growth in the pursuit of meaningful employment and responsible, informed citizenship."

For the Montevallo students listed below, the FIRST STAGE of accomplishing the latter portion of that MISSION is ending in a few days. Soon they will be entering upon a NEW STAGE of experience of the life-long adventure of learning and earning a living.

At Montevallo, we like to say we are preparing graduates for their LAST jobs—not just their first ones. That's certainly been the case of the members of the Summer Class of 1987. As they soon join in the long procession of Montevallo men and women who have preceded them since 1896, UM faculty and staff feel confident, therefore, in proclaiming MISSION ACCOMPLISHED.

The unique photographic treatment of the University of Montevallo ceremonial mace, composed against a contemporary background, suggests that the strength of our past is not being forgotten as we move into the future. Indeed, in preparing for tomorrow, we are committed not to forget the basic principles contributing to our humanity—such principles as those embedded in: Honor, Industria, Fidelitas, Charitas, Fortitudo, Dedicatio, Responsibilitas, Virtutes.

Each Latin word above was engraved on one of the "borns" on the head of Montevallo's mace by silversmith Herr Dr. Frank Kiss. The mace, engraved also with the founding date of the University, A.D. 1896, is carried by a student leader in five academic ceremonies annually, including graduation and Honors and Founders Day convocations.

The mace is a symbol of our tradition—and of our tomorrow.

WELCOME THE SUMMER 1987 GRADUATING CLASS

The UM students whose names are listed below are in the final process of fulfilling requirements for graduation on August 14, 1987—in a ceremony featuring Dr. J. Lloyd Knox, Bishop, The United Methodist Church, Birmingham, Alabama. We invite you to join us in saluting them for their ACCOMPLISHMENT—and to welcome them into your personal and professional communities. We at Montevallo believe they will prove to be valued friends, neighbors, colleagues, employees, and citizens.
